LIBERTAS-Europäisches Institut Okt 2015, 2015. sonst. Bücher. Book Condition: Neu. 29x21x cm. Neuware - Reflections on Dr Leavis, the Downing School of English, and Morris Shapira by a Leavis pupil of the closing years of Leavis's time at Downing. More a memoir than a study, it takes letters received from Dr Leavis and one from Q. D. Leavis as the anchors for a story about the turbulences of that time as experienced by an undergraduate but recollected in retrospect. It considers the proposed reasons, causes of damage done, the nature of a single incident, the framework of a search for healing. One issue is that of 'pastoral care' for undergraduate and former students. It is also about proximity to a national icon and the dynamics of teaching or learning in that context. It sketches a personal link to Dr Leavis, its privileges and its pitfalls, its emotional liability, while re-affirming or re-discovering the integrity and the necessity of Leavis' creative achievement in searching for a constant celebration of creative life sustaining values in the flux of the modern world after 1918. Simultaneously, it regrets the frantic debates and wounding squabbles within the Downing School from about 1963 onwards which denied the values the Downing experience sought to establish. It is argued that this was, in part, made inevitable by a cult building up around 'the great man' in the search for security in the latter years which created both zealots and revisionists to their own detriment. Respect transformed into discipleship - a form of distance - and this into a form of dependence requiring revolt. In the process damage was done to the cause, to individuals around it, and to figures in the Diaspora. Based on letters received from Dr Leavis and one from Mrs. Leavis, the account speculates about...
