Not illustrated. 1911 Excerpt: .fret of everyday life again, but strong in remembrance. I once heard Mr. Brooks preach a great sermon about this: That nobody could stay on the mount, but every one knew it, and went his way with courage by reason of such moments. You cannot think what a sermon it was! I have just been reading the life of the Master of Balliol, and finding great pleasure within. You knew, didn t you? how fond he and Mrs. Dugdale were of each other, and that he was the kindest of friends to her sons. There is little of this in the two big volumes, I suppose because she is not given to letterwriting, which the Master certainly was, --some of his letters belong almost to the level of our E. F. G., --or I must say quite, when I remember some to Dean Stanley and to the Tennysons. But this is too long a letter for the busiest of hard-working mornings. (TO MISS ELLEN CHASE) South Berwick, September 27, 1897. Dear Ellen, --Thank you again, and then once more for my little lemon-tree, which is keeping me company again on the sunny window-seat here, close by my secretary where I write. It has had a happy summer in the shade of the lilacs (and yet not out of the sun all day), and at this moment it has not many leaves, but no end of little lemons!!! One of them is as large as the...
