Not illustrated. 1919 Excerpt: . . . PLAYING WITH BABY HAT a wonderful thing it would be if you could get inside the mind of a little child--an infant--and look out through the babys eyes! Of course, you did do that once; you were it; but you were so busy taking things in, registering your first impressions of the amazing world in which you found yourself, choosing between the things you did that proved useful and the things that didnt get you anywhere, that you forgot to remember how things looked to you. Now you feel as if you had always been here, as if you came anyway, with a ready-made knowledge of heat and cold, hardness and softness, surfaces and shapes, colors and sounds. By no means; you had to learn them all; you had to learn even the difference between that which was you and that which was the...
