Turn your Valleys of Achor, whatever they may be, into doors of hope. Silence even death-knells with the chime, In the world to come, life everlasting! And if we can further prolong, it is only to recur to our opening lesson, but now with special reference to the closing hour of all. Death--our own death and the deaths of those we love--is the appointment of God. If He shows His guiding hand and sovereignty in all the varied events, the gleams and glooms of life, so, be assured, He decrees the time, the circumstances of the terminaing journey; when Jordan shall be reached; when the mission of the Fiery Pillar shall be ended; when its light shall be reflected for the last time in the dark waters, and Achor s rocky gates be un-barred! Oh, as not the hours of existence, so not the hour of death is left an open question, haphazard, indetermined. It was He who gave the final summons to Israel s leader. It was He who selected the rocky cleft in Mount Nebo for His place of sepulture, and, under the desert s starry sky, composed His servant s limbs for their final rest. David, by the will (or, as that means, by the appointment) of God, fell asleep and was laid to his fathers. We may appropriately remember the Prophet Elijah, as he took his last journey by the same Jordan which...
