Coronado in 1. 41 was in actual contact with people who had visited the Red Pipestone quarries in Minnesota by way of Blue River Valley. Platte Uiver and the Missouri, evidenced by the fact that they knew and described the region beyond them, possessed pipestone from that locality, and were at war with its people. Thus we have an actual historically preserved reference to the region of. Minnesota not quite forty. nine years after the landing of Columbus. Earlier Spanish references are less satisfactory. More remotely distant was gamed a knowledge by the forces of Herinindo de Soto concerning the area of Minnesota, the same year, for they were far down the Mississippi in contact with people who seldom if ever came northward. The statement recently made that the Mississippi was discovered in 1498 by Vespucci is absolutely false. The origin of that page of deplorable errors, which has been offered for acceptance as history and universally rejected for the very excellent reason that it is not true, rests upon a basis of unsupported opinion. It can be proved that Vespucci was at his place of business in Seville. Spain, continually from May, 1497, to a late date in 1498 (Critical History nf America, Volume II. , pages 187, 142). The ambiguity of the Vespucci papers have caused great doubt because there are no satisfactory contemporaneous proofs to sustain the claim that he sailed past the delta of the Mississippi. Hernando de Soto was the original...
